Lock It Down: Simple Ways to Protect Your Online Accounts

Your online accounts hold some of your most valuable information, from banking and shopping accounts to email and social media. Fortunately, protecting them doesn't have to be complicated. Start with these five habits:

Create stronger passwords.
Use long passwords or passphrases that are unique for every account. Avoid using birthdays, names, or common words.

Keep your devices updated.
Software updates often contain important security patches that protect against newly discovered threats. Turn on automaticupdates whenever possible.

Watch for suspicious logins.
Many online accounts will notify you when a new device signs in. If you receive an alert you weren't expecting, change your password immediately.

Use a password manager.
Password managers help you create and safely store strong, unique passwords without having to remember them all.

Think Before You Click.
Small actions.
Big protection.

Don't Let Your Bank Account Jump-Scare You

Halloween is almost here, which means the holiday season is right behind it. Between gifts, travel, food, and all those "just this once" purchases, holiday spending has a way of sneaking up on you.

The good news is a little planning now goes a long way. Pick a number, start setting money aside, and give yourself options before the sales do the deciding.
